

In the palm of your hand

We went out to love god but ended up loving the world

What is this magic you cast without asking us first

The stars reflect your love and the universe your vastness

The sea shows its love for you by quenching your children's thirst

You told the sun to scream its light when darkness is to fall

Silence fell to its knees when it felt your synchronization

The earth floats in bliss as it is harmonised in this cosmos

I now know where the universe ends as the universe fits in my soul
